REPUBLICAN DUTIES IN CRISIS OUTLINED BY SENATOR WATKINS TO COUNTY COMMITTEE MEETING

Must Make Sure Majority Party Does A Good Job, Schuylkill County Senator Tells Party Leaders at Annual Meeting, Saturday, in Doylestown

(By STAFF REPORTER)

DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 29—"The Republican Party has no need to apologize for its record in American history," State Senator G. Harold Watkins, of Schuylkill County, told the annual meeting of the Republican County Committee in the Armory here Saturday afternoon. "But in these times it cannot crawl into a basket and pull the lid on over it," he continued, stressing the importance of exercising the fundamental American right of criticism of the policies of the party in power.

"It is our duty now to make sure the majority party does a good job," the Senator declared. "The Republicans are patriotic and will stand side by side with the Democrats when the issue is decided. But only Congress can send our sons to war, and until that is decided, opposition is justified."

As an American citizen, the speaker said he objected to the suspension of the Constitution and the appointment of Ickes, Henderson, and Hopkins as a Committee of Three to run the government in the emergency. "I regret the presence in the Cabinet," he said, "of two men who claim to be Republicans. And I regret the presence in the government of those who are, or have been, Communist fellow travelers."

"The two-party system is one of the most important things in the Republic," he declared. "It is the only way the winner of an election can truly represent the majority. When more parties are involved, a minority gains control of the government."

Speaking in ringing and inspirational tones, Senator Watkins attacked modern realism as contrary to the idealism of the men who founded America. "The only thing that matters in America today is personal and temporary security," he charged. "How much do I get out of it? Is the typical American reaction?"

This attitude is in direct contrast to the sacrifices of men like Washington and Jefferson, who risked everything they had, even life itself, for the benefit of future generations, the Senator said, and he pointed out that nowhere is this selfish shortsightedness more apparent than in the citizen's opinion of the mounting billions of public debt. "I don't have to pay it is the usual remark," he said. "Of course you don't have to pay it. But fifty years from now posterity may curse us for our selfishness in not assuming our burden."

"The millions yet unborn are the stockholders of America. Laws are made for the centuries. Do we think we're more important than any other generation, past or future?"

Summarizing his theme with the poetic line, "Only the dream is real," he traced the slow and hard advance of man from a primitive beast, with the corresponding development of principles and ideals and the sacrifices involved in their growth. The outspoken Senator charged that the irresponsibility of the 20th century is a return to the original beastlike thoughtlessness of early man. "Americans accept the blessings of freedom as their right," he said, "and forget the sacrifices made all down through the years in order that our opportunities might exist."

"As recently as three years ago there was little patriotism in America," Senator Watkins said. "Then Holland and Norway and the others began to disappear and there was a revival of national spirit here."

"This is the time," he said, "to realize the principles for which our forefathers sacrificed so much. Our freedoms—of speech, of the press—did not come by accident."

"The Pilgrims were people like us. They had jobs. They had families. But they believed in a principle and they sacrificed everything for it. They left their security for the sake of a belief and came to a strange and hostile land. They were men in those days. They were women in those days."

Citing the sacrifices and struggles made by his own father and grandfather for the benefit of their children, Senator Watkins declared he felt it was his obligation to fight the false premise of paternalism in government as long as he lives.

"Paternalism in government is new here," he said, "but it is as old as autocracy in government. It makes the government a father, not a Republic. Actually a Republic is the child of the citizens—who must support it."

"The modern attitude," the speaker charged, "is that 'My government owes me a living—I don't owe it anything.' In catering to this belief, the alphabetical agencies in Washington are feeding out the taxpayers' money."

With the late stages of the Roman Empire as an analogy, Senator Watkins declared this spending will be "a ruinous." "How long can anyone, including a government, spend more than he earns? Just so long as his credit lasts."

"The most popular government," he said, "is the one that spends money and imposes no taxes. The most unpopular government is the one that imposes taxes and doesn't spend money."

Although the water consumption in Doylestown is running from 25,000 to 30,000 gallons a day more than usual because of the dry weather, there is no danger of a shortage because of the excellent supply.

Herbert P. Coulton, superintendent of the water works, said about 350,000 gallons of water a day are being consumed, which is normal for this time of year, but slightly higher than last year the same time because of the drought.

Unintelligent Evasion

Washington, Sept. 26. AS the House hearings on the immensely important business of price control approach an end, Mr. Leon Henderson, the President's choice for Price Administrator, seems in a rather painful position. Instead of gaining ground either in Congress or outside, as a result of the elaborate explanations of his views, with which the record is filled, he appears to have lost ground. It is easy to understand.

AFTER Mr. B. M. Baruch had concluded the clearest and most convincing presentation of the whole subject which has yet been made, he endorsed Mr. Henderson as the best available man for the job of Price Administrator. At the time Mr. Henderson was in very bad odor in Congress. It had been charged that his organization was packed with Communist men and women and that Four shallow springs have failed and the water is being supplied from the deep wells which have an excellent supply.

Because of the planning by Councilman George E. Willard, chairman of the water committee, the County Seat water department is ready for just such an emergency.

Water Works Superintendent Coulton said that a drought invariably means higher than average water consumption because of the larger number of baths taken due to the hot weather and the scrubbing and washing necessitated by the dust and dirt which accompanies a dry spell.

With no end in sight for the drought, farmers and out-of-town residents in the rural sections are beginning to feel the pinch of the depletion of water supplies with cisterns and wells giving out. In many cases reaching a low ebb, or drying up.

"Our water supply is good and there is no immediate danger," said Engineer Coulton.

The boys, it is alleged, broke into the bungalow on Tuesday evening, and spent the night there. The boys were taken into custody early Wednesday morning, following which they were given a hearing before Justice Krouse.

Nothing of great value, it was said, was taken from the bungalow, but the boys were said to have helped themselves to some food during the night.

M DAY HAS BEEN PASSED

For years Americans have been told of the coming of M Day, that day on which the government, through press, radio and sound truck, had planned to inform every citizen that the day of mobilization of the nation had arrived.

The President was to speak over the radio, ordering 10,000 manufacturers to proceed at once to fill Army and Navy orders prepared in advance. Reservists were to rush to their stations. The day was to shift the routing of the lives of all—it was destined to be a day that would linger in the memory of every living American.

A dispatch from Washington points out that M Day has come and gone, unnoticed by the citizen. No one even seems to know just when M Day occurred. Broadly speaking, it is thought to have been September 9, 1940, when Congress provided $2,000,000,000 for ordnance for the nation's new armed forces. In the ensuing year, the plans of the Army and Navy have been put into operation comparatively quietly.

It is now revealed that there was no intention on the part of the government ever to use the M Day procedure except in case of invasion. Now that Americans know what a job it was to gear the nation's industrial plants to the production of novel and ingenious wartime machinery, they can be grateful that an awareness of the country's peril came a long time ahead of hostilities.

A full year has not provided much more than a preliminary preparation for turning out defense materials. What confusion would have resulted had 10,000 manufacturers, unprepared for a sudden shift to wartime production, got their orders in a single day is not difficult to envision.

REMEMBERING NATHAN HALE

The words of a young school teacher, uttered just 165 years ago, breathe the same inspiring courage today that they did then. "I only regret that I have but one life to give for my country."

This is an appropriate time to take a look at Nathan Hale. Why is it that heroes of the past are always visualized with long beards or with pompous attitudes? As a matter of fact, most military heroes have been young men. Custer, to name one, was 36 when he was killed. He was a brigadier general at 22.

When the British hanged Hale in 1776, he was below the present draft age, a mere boy of 20 who had graduated from Yale three years before and spent the interim teaching school, first in East Haddam, Connecticut, and later at New London. Soon after the Revolutionary War broke out he joined the Colonial forces as a first lieutenant.

Nathan Hale had less than 15 months to live, but he didn't know that. After engaging in recruiting duty at New London, Hale took part in the siege of Boston. On January 1, 1776, he was commissioned a captain. Early in September General Washington needed information concerning the enemy, and Hale volunteered.

Hale obtained the information visiting New York and Long Island disguised as a Dutch schoolmaster. But he never brought it back. Captured behind the British lines, and it still is. But Nathan Hale's execution gave his country an example of devotion more valuable than the military information that died with him.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol Jan. 1, 1880. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

Last Saturday morning the water-back of the range at the residence of S. W. Groff exploded and blew the range into pieces and scattered its particles and the coals that were in it in every direction, doing much damage. A hole was made in the ceiling, and everything around was scorched and bruised as if a battle had been raging there. Quite fortunately, no one was in the room at the time or loss of life would doubtless have to be recorded as the force of the explosion was terrific.

P. L. Long, No. 25, P. and A. M. The time honored institution has almost completed a century of its existence, its warrant from the Provincial Grand Lodge under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of Great Britain bearing the date of March 15, A. These constituted the entire membership. At the present time the lodge numbers 139 members upon its roll and the officers installed on last Saturday evening for the ensuing year are: Benjamin W. Boucher, W. M.; Allen L. Garwood, S. W.; Israel S. Tomlinson, J. W.; William Kinsey, treasurer; Charles E. Scott, secretary; W. M. Stackhouse, S. D.; E. Woolston, J. D.; John Ridgway, Pursuivant; J. John Trumbauer, of Doylestown township, is one of the few persons who have filled their ice houses this winter.

At the meeting held in the Baptist Church last Saturday evening, organization of the Bristol Temperance Union was completed. The committee appointed at a previous meeting to nominate officers made its report, which was accepted and acted upon. The following were elected: President, Samuel Swain; vice-president, Rev. W. H. Combs; secretary, Frank P. Adams; treasurer, Edna Warner; executive committee, Sarah H. Pierce, Mrs. Berrow, Jesse B. Morris, Mrs. S. Swain, Mrs. Stradling, Dr. Adams, S. H. Hawke, J. G. Rose Marie Paone Becomes Bride of Mr. Monachello

At a most attractive Blessed Mother nuptial ceremony solemnized in St. Ann's R. C. Church yesterday at three o'clock, Miss Rose Marie Paone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Paone, 312 Delaware street, became the bride of Mr. Frederick Monachello, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Monachello, 115 Elm street.

The blue and white tones of the costumes worn by the bride and her attendants, carried out the Blessed Mother ceremony as provided by the Catholic Church, and a large number of relatives and friends witnessed the wedding.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and after that her was her mother, Mr. Anthony Paone, as master of ceremonies, with the Misses Yolanda Monachello, Pam street, sister of the groom; Miss Mary Zucher, Tullytown, a cousin of the bride; and Miss Mary Henry, Dorrance street, serving as bridesmaids.

The best man was Private Louis A. Paone, Baltimore, Md., a brother of the bride, and ushers were inclusive of Messrs. Neddie Bono, Dorrance street, and Ellis E. Ratcliffe, Jr., Jefferson avenue.

The organist, Miss Frances Tamarella, played the bridal marches, and provided the accompaniment for Mrs. Howard English, Duckley street, who sang "Ave Maria." The Rev. Fr. Peter Pinci officiated.

The bride was attired completely in white, her modern bouquet being composed of white orchids, gardenias and bouvardia. Her gown of silk bengaline featured wide ruffles on the long, full skirt, the ruffles being edged in narrow lace. Small ruffles, lace edged, also enhanced the pointed ends of the long sleeves, and the yoke of the square neckline. The skirt was attached to the bodice by shirring, the skirt ending in a lengthy train. Her Dutch cap of lace held a veil of tulle, and slippers were of white satin.

The four attendants were costumed alike. They wore gowns of poudre blue silk bengaline, fashioned like that of the bride, with the exception that the sleeves were three-quarter length, and the gowns had short trains. They wore Dutch caps of white tulle, with shoulder veils of poudre blue. Slippers were of white satin; and their modern bouquets included a variety of blue and white flowers with white roses predominating.

The men of the bridal party wore black trousers; white jackets; ties and handkerchiefs of maroon; and gardenia boutonnières.

For the ceremony Mrs. Monachello, mother of the groom, wore a dress of teal blue, with matching hat. Her corsage was composed of white roses.

A week's journey to Niagara Falls, and other points in New York state, is being participated in by Mr. and Mrs. Monachello. The travelling costume of the bride included a gold-toned wood dress, covert cloth top coat; black accessories, and corsage of yellow roses. The couple received relatives and a few friends at the home of the groom's parents, immediately after the ceremony; and at 7:30 last evening dinner was served to 60 guests at the Roma Gardens, Trenton, N. J.

The newlyweds will reside in an apartment at 1253 Radcliffe street.

Driven by Francis Jeffery, Marshall street, Philadelphia, Jeffery was uninjured. The driver stated to Pennsylvania Motor Police, who investigated, that he failed to make the turn at the end of State Road, near the thoroughfare leading to Burlington-Bristol bridge. The car struck the metal standard, the car being considerably damaged.

Traffic was tied up at Lincoln Point, Lincoln Highway, near Morrisville, last evening, when at 8:30 two cars collided. Traffic at that point at present is reduced to two lanes, due to highway repairs and a detour, and strings of cars were delayed.

At 12:26 p. m., yesterday, at Yardley, cars of Mrs. Charlotte Neher, of Merion station, Montgomery County, and of Robert Brown, Philadelphia, crashed. No injuries were listed for the drivers or passengers, although the cars were somewhat damaged.

The Great Game of Politics

table, but to accept it as an outside suggestion would seem to mean that the Administration itself was bereft of new ideas, had found it was on the wrong track and now must be guided by the counsel of experience—an altogether abhorrent idea in higher Administration circles. Another explanation was that Mr. Henderson could not publicly agree with the Baruch plans without repudiating those of his young counsel, Mr. David Ginsberg, who, it is understood, drew the pending measure.

A THIRD explanation was that the close political link of the New Deal with the labor and farm lobbies made it impossible for Mr. Henderson to follow Mr. Baruch in urging control of food prices and wages. And, finally, it was said that Mr. Henderson is so congenitally controversial and loquacious that he could not refrain from making an argument, though with some of what he said he did not himself fully agree. At any rate, the net result is that the situation, which had seemed to be clarifying, once more has become confused and the opposition to Mr. Henderson, which had lessened with the Baruch endorsement, has stiffened very much—particularly in the Senate, where the swing toward sanity seems a little stronger than formerly.

—O—

HOWEVER, it was Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau who pushed Mr. Henderson farther out on the limb. Because Mr. Morgenthau, who, when let alone, generally talks good sense, made a strong statement which sounded so like Mr. Baruch's statement (except for one thing) that it might easily have been made by that gentleman. Actually, he reaffirmed practically everything Mr. Baruch had said, including the necessity of putting the ceiling over farm prices, at which Mr. Henderson had balked, and to which the Administration has since opposed.

THE one exception was the matter of wage regulation. There Mr. Morgenthau succumbed. He took every hurdle but the last one. In opposing wage regulation he declared that "in free countries labor is not a commodity; human beings are not property and should not be treated as such." That, of course, was just a piece of demagoguery. No one has as much as hinted that labor should not be treated as human beings—and Mr. Morgenthau well knows it. Also, he knows that, while labor is not a commodity, the wages of labor are the chief factor in commodity prices and to permit them to run wild means that no price control can be effective and inflation cannot be averted.

—O—

HE found himself able to speak firmly about farm prices (are not farmers human beings, too?) and later about business profits, over which he wants to put a very rigid six per cent. ceiling—but he does not want to put any ceiling over wages at all. It is a pity he checked short here and it is difficult not to believe that the reasons were political instead of economic—that he faked that jump because of the consistent White House unwillingness to oppose the leaders of organized labor on any proposition whatever. On this issue these leaders, being all engaged in an effort to push wages up and extend their power, naturally oppose any governmental restraint. It is too bad Mr. Morgenthau could not bring himself to advocate the flexible regulation of wages which Mr. Baruch suggests and which does not affect the right to strike nor the right to more money when a case can be made out. However, it was fine to see him otherwise in accord—and especially in the matter of food prices. His was the first Administration voice to be raised on that subject—and it took courage for him to raise it.

—O—

THAT, at least, segregates him from Mr. Henderson. It is a strange thing that it seems to penetrate the minds of neither Administration politicians nor labor leaders that the plan to include regulation of both wages and food prices, so as to make possible real price control, is directly in the interests of the farmer and the laborer, not against them. Once prices run away—and they are bound to run away with no restraint on wages and food prices—the chief sufferers will be the farmers and the laborers. Their real friends are those who want to include them—not those who insist upon excluding them. It does not take much intelligence to understand that. Yet politics in our country is such that the statesmen who understand it very clearly indeed evade saying so publicly.

Miss Jennie M. Barraco And A. F. Durante Are Wed

The marriage of Miss Jennie M. Barraco, 332 Lincoln avenue, to Mr. Anthony F. Durante, Philadelphia, was an event of Sunday morning, the ceremony taking place at 11 o'clock in St. Ann's R. C. Church. The church choir sang the mass, the Rev. Father Peter Pinci performing the ceremony.

The Misses Angelina Barraco, a sister of the bride; Natalie Palealeale, Lincoln avenue; and Ann Tonetti, Philadelphia, were the bridesmaids who attended the former Miss Jennie Barraco. The groomsmen for Mr. Durante was Mr. Robert Gallo, Philadelphia; and ushers were Mr. Leo Concelleri, Philadelphia; and Mr. Vincent Barraco, brother of the bride.

The young woman, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white Chantilly lace, it having a sweetheart neckline, with the front of the bodice being shirred. Narrow ruffles of net graced the neck and hip-line. The long sleeves ended in points over the hands. The dress train extended for four yards. A veil of illusion was worn, this being attached to an orange blossom wreath. Her slippers were of satin, and she carried an arm bouquet of white roses and orchids.

The trio of maids were gowned in poudre blue, the costumes of Chantilly lace being fashioned like that of the bride, but minus trains. Sweetheart style head-dress of each, also made of the lace, was trimmed at the back with a matching velvet bow. Blue satin slippers were worn; and each attendant carried mixed flowers.

The wedding breakfast was served immediately after the ceremony at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carlo Barraco, parents of the bride; with dinner at three at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carman Durante, in Philadelphia. During the evening a reception took place in Trades Hall.

For a week's journey to the Pocono Mountains, Mr. Durante wore a dress of black silk crepe, black wool coat with trim of silver fox, black felt hat, and corsage of orchids. The home of the newlyweds will be at 7212 Marsden street, Philadelphia.

ON THE SCREENS

BRISTOL THEATRE
"Puddin' Head," a comedy featuring Judy Canova, the singing nightingale, and Francis Lederer, Raymond Walborn and Slim Summerville, is showing today at the Bristol Theatre.

Combining the destructive activities of a European government secret agent with the "black magic" of native voodooism, but holding a fine comedy balance throughout, "King of the Zombies" is now at the Bristol Theatre.

GRAND THEATRE
The studio that produced "Dodge City," "Virginia City" and "Santa Fe Trail" has now added a new and exciting film to that impressive roster. More intense than any of those three pictures, Warner Bros.' "Bad Men of Missouri," which had its first local showing at the Grand Theatre last night, kept the audience thrilled.

throughout the entire showing. Dramatic excitement is the keynote of this film which tells the story of the terrible, yet benevolent, Younger brothers, who burned the trails of the west during the 1870's. It is a bullet-splashed saga of America's untamed frontier, and of the bad men who made Missouri great.

RITZ THEATRE

Loaded with swift-paced gags and several brand new hit tunes, Paramount's new comedy with music, "Road to Zanzibar," opened last night at the Ritz Theatre. Starring Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour, three of the screen's best entertainers, the film is easily one of the funniest that has come along this season.

march as the bride entered the edifice escorted by her uncle, Mr. Jesse Burke, Corson street.

The bride and groom each had one attendant, Miss Olive Winslow, Beaver street, being the maid of honor; and Mr. Jesse Bachofer, Tullytown, serving as groomsman.

A gown of white moire taffeta, waterfall design, was worn by the former Miss Girton. The sleeves, puffed at the shoulders, ended in points over the hands. The neckline was heart-style, and the full bodice shirred onto a yoke had trim of small artificial flowers. The full skirt swept to a graceful train. Her face veil and long veil of net were edged in lace, and her tiara was composed of brilliants and pearls. Satin slippers were worn, and the bride carried white roses in an arm bouquet.

Miss Winslow, the maid of honor, was attired in a floor-length gown of poudre blue silk bengaline, with yoke of matching lace edged in velvet ribbon. Her short puffed sleeves had a narrow band of lace. The floral head-dress was made of silver sequins, and from this fell a poudre blue shoulder-length veil. Her slippers were of silver, and she carried an arm bouquet of pink roses.

For a three-day journey to New York City the bride wore a dress of maroon velvet with trim of white lace, maroon velvet turban and maroon suede slippers. The newlyweds plan to reside at 413 Jefferson avenue.

A reception took place in A. O. H. hall, Corson street, immediately after the ceremony.

If you have a house to rent, advertise it in The Courier.

$1,000 should be sufficient to make one nice apartment in your home for rental purposes.

If your property is clear of mortgages why not borrow this money and make the necessary improvements.

The rental received will pay off the mortgage and you will have a profitable investment for years to come.

You have the house. We have the money. Why not call and talk it over.
